

Washington D.C. as a Latin Classroom: Modern City, Ancient Lessons

THE PANTHEON OF ROME VS. THE PANTHEONS OF D.C.

You are Invited...

Please join us as Classical Studies major and University Honors Program student Emily Marcus presents her senior honors thesis, the creation and piloting of a supplementary curriculum for intermediate-level Latin classes. Emily's project reflects her academic experiences at GW, internship in Latin pedagogy at School Without Walls, interest in Community Outreach, and her career goals of curricular development in the teaching of Latin. Emily's workbook illustrates to students the relevance of their study of Latin by presenting concepts, themes, and motifs from Latin texts and art and architecture of the Roman world echoed in Washington, D.C. Following the presentation, a panel of DC Latin teachers will offer suggestions to support revising the workbook for eventual publication. Input from the audience also welcome.

Unit 2 Title Page: Pantheon, Rome vs. Jefferson Memorial, DC

What: Presentation and Workshop
When: Thursday, April 30th, 2015
5:00–7:00 pm
Where: Presentation at 5:00 pm, Gelman 702;
Reception to follow, Gelman 609,
The Andrew Oliver Reading Room
RSVP: RSVP by April 24, 2015
Contact: Elise A. Friedland, efried@gwu.edu or 202-994-3056

THE LAYOUT OF ROME VS. DC & TRIUMPHAL ARCHITECTURE

This program is presented by The Shenkman Career Services Fund;
Co-sponsored by the Department of Classical & Near Eastern Languages & Civilizations and GW Libraries.

Unit 3 Title Page: Arch of Constantine, Rome vs. Union Station